Stephen Skelton convicted of pupil sex abuse at schools

- 8 December 2011

A former teacher has been given a suspended jail sentence for assaulting two boys, one of them when he worked at a school in west London which admits it had a "terrible legacy" of sex abuse.

Stephen Skelton, 63, attacked a 12-year-old in 1984, when he was employed by St Benedict's School in Ealing.

He also abused a boy of 10 at Well Hill Park School, Fareham, Hampshire, in 1993 or 1994, Scotland Yard said.

His six-month sentence was suspended for two years by Isleworth Crown Court.
