Dear Amy

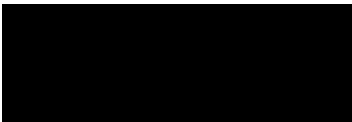

Further to your letter on Friday about virtual hearings we have contacted those of our clients who were due to give evidence. With regard to the Salvation Army whilst they are not a CP we considered it prudent to ask them how they would feel about giving evidence virtually. In principle they are not opposed to a virtual hearing but do not consider it would be appropriate for their witness to be giving evidence from his own home where he is currently working from. They have noted that if by June there is some greater flexibility which would enable him to travel to his office then he would be willing to give evidence from there. They have also suggested that if you wished to put in writing to them the questions and topics which it was the intention to raise in oral evidence they would be willing to answer those questions in writing now.

Regards

Paula
