Achieving Best Evidence was originally drafted and published in January 2002 on behalf of the Home Office by a writing team led by Professor Graham Davies from the University of Leicester. The guidance was later revised and published in 2007 by the National Policing Improvement Agency with contributions from a wide ranging group of academics and practitioners.

2011 Revision

The writing team consisted of Dr. Kevin Smith (Specialist Operations Centre, National Policing Improvement Agency), Dr. Gary Shaw (Crime Operational Support, National Policing Improvement Agency), Simon Deacy (Association of Chief Police Officers), Jackie Kerr and Nadine Tilbury (Crown Prosecution Service), Gillian Harrison and Clayton Smith (Better Trials Unit, Ministry of Justice).

Comments and contributions were made by members of the Ministry of Justice Vulnerable and Intimidated Witness/Child Evidence Steering Group:

John Wright (Her Majesty's Courts Service), Kathy Rowe (Hull Safeguarding Children Board), Barbara Esam (NSPCC), Sallie Churchill (Association of Chief Police Officers), Ian B Mulcahey (Merseyside Police), Julie Clouder and Guy Wilson (Ministry of Justice), Shaun Bruwer (Victim Support) and Bob Macdonald (Department of Health).

The writing team would like to acknowledge the many individuals and organisations that contributed their time and expertise to the revision of this guidance:

Ruth Marchant (Registered Intermediary and Triangle Services), Laura Hoyano (Wadham College, Oxford University), Gillian Mayfield and Cynthia Davies (Department for Education), Stephen Gear (Welsh Assembly), Jason Connolly and Kirsty Scott (Ministry of Justice).
