that AN-A92 prompted him at this point. Neil becomes more incoherent and went onto say that one evening he and Peter lay together naked on a bed, and that Peter had kissed Neil, and that Peter had had an emission. It was at this point that Neil more or less broke down. He was very emotional and upset all the time that I saw him. I think that at some stage one of them told me they had seen the Bishop of Southwark. I told the three of them that I would reflect on what they told me. I then went and tried to phone the Bishop of Southwark, without success leaving a message on his answering phone. I then phoned Bishop Michael Peter's brother, telling him where things had gone to. He asked me not to phone his brother for half an hour or so. I then phoned Peter telling him what Neil had said. Peter said that the story about kneeling naked together to say the penitential psalms was not true, and he said he did not have an emission of any genital contact with Neil. Peter said the cold showers had happened and that he had this ^{to do} with regards to cold showers. Peter said that this was ^{so} when a group of his Little Brothers were to go abroad he used cold showers as a way to toughen them up physically. He did not
